WET APOSTLES RETURN HOME VERY DRY

GLOOM WAS THE PORTION OF BEER SEEKERS OVER BORDER

New Law Becomes Effective Thursday Night—Five Hundred Business Houses In Ontario Have Applied For Permits to Dispense Beverage—Price Will Be Ten Cents a Glass.

Instead of finding the doors swinging both ways and bearing a sign of welcome, drawn curtains and shut doors with the latch turned tight greeted a thirsty group of excursionists from Columbus, who invaded Windsor, Ontario, Sunday, being under the impression that 4.4 per cent beer could be dispensed legally. But, despite the fact that their hopes of open selling were shattered, solicitors in the streets were freely doling out information as to where they could find the much coveted beverages.

Not all the excursionists, however, according to Clark Doughty, who sponsored the trip under the auspices of the Sportsmen's Tourist club, sought out the dispensers of wet goods, some leaving the train at Toledo, while still others visited with friends in Detroit or witnessed the baseball game between the Detroit Tigers and the New York Yankees.

Leaving Columbus at midnight on Saturday, a large majority of those on the two special trains confined much of their talk enroute to the possibilities of being able to legally "wet their whistles" with real Canadian ale, after a long siege of Volsteadism.

Enthusiasm ran rampant after the special trains arrived in Detroit shortly after six o'clock on Sunday morning and it was only a comparatively short time until those seeking a drink rather than partake of breakfast, boarded the ferry crossing the Detroit river, to find that the Sunday "blue law" was everything that that implies and possibly more.

Finding everything closed, the invaders stood about the street corners in small groups bitterly denouncing the world at large for having led them to believe that "everything was rosy in Canada." Having devoted the night prior to their arrival to visualizing a barroom set up in all of its glory and shelves lavishly decorated with various Dominion liquors and ales, there is little wonder that they were disappointed.

All the oldtime self-termed splendor of such a barroom with a big white-aproned public servant behind the bar calling "one up" was gone and in its stead stood empty rooms, which are nothing more than monuments to the grand old days long since past.

The cloud of gloom which fast overtook the Ohioans, however, disappeared just as fast as it loomed on the horizon, when they were greeted by a steady stream of "assistants," who were always more than ready to show a fellow sufferer where he could wet his palate with something other than "white mule," "near beer," (containing less than one-half of one per cent of alcohol) or "synthetic gin."

So, in spite of all the efforts of the Dominion officials, as well as those across the river in Detroit to keep the "lid clamped down tight" on illegal sales, "blind pigs" did a rushing business and both towns were on what might be termed a "wide open" basis.

Boats plying between Detroit and Windsor also came in for their share of Ohio money, while excursionists made the trip into Dominion territory. Those on the train, however, were not the only ones who were "hoodwinked" into believing that this territory was wet, but many others representing a number of states drove into Canada over the weekend, only to be disappointed.

In Ontario alone 500 business houses, such as confectioneries, drug stores, groceries and other such establishments, have applied for permits to dispense 4.4 per cent beer after Thursday midnight, when the law amending the prohibition legislation becomes effective.

There is little possibility that the old five cent stein will become a reality for thus far the government has placed taxes amounting to 22½ cents per gallon on the ale, so it is expected that 10 cents per glass will be the popular price.

The meeting adjourned by repeating the W. C. T. U. benediction. A delightful social period followed during which the hostess served dainty refreshments.

"POPPY DAY" IN HONOR OF BRAVE BOYS

Friday, May 29, Set Aside For Sacred Memories of Departed Heroes.

The veterans of Foreign wars and the American Legion will observe Friday, May 29, as "Poppy Day" a day set aside for the preservation of the sacred memories of those who made the supreme sacrifice in the World war, the Spanish war and other foreign wars.

The custom of wearing a budding poppy on Memorial day and by this means provide employment to disabled veterans, is most commendable and no doubt every citizen will gladly respond to the appeal.

While many of the flowers are made by the women's auxiliaries a factory is maintained in Kansas City for the manufacture of the flowers and in this place are employed veterans who are incapacitated for other work. The flowers are exact replicas of the blossoms so familiar to the ex-soldier boys during their campaign in the fields of Flanders.

CITIZENS' MILITARY TRAINING CAMPS

Columbus May 18.—Significant with the interest being manifested in Citizens' Military Training Camps is the fact that numerous educational institutions and business concerns throughout the country are beginning to acknowledge the value of the month's training by encouraging their students and employees to attend the camps this summer, according to Major-General Omar Bundy, commanding the Fifth Corps Area at Fort Hayes.

Prominent among the instances of recognition of the broadly educational nature of the movement made by institutions of higher learning is a C. M. T. C. scholarship established by Columbia University. Leadership, force of character, love of outdoor sports and other qualities similar to those required for election to the Rhodes Scholarship are to govern the selection of the C. M. T. C. student who will go to Columbia.

"BUDDY" ALSO HAD CRITICISM TO MAKE

General Bullard, who has just retired from active service in the army, inspected the citizens' military training camp at Plattsburg in August of 1923. His son, "Buddy" Bullard, was a private in Company D that summer. The general's inspection of "Buddy's" uniform, rifle and tent was exhaustive. "Private Bullard, your left heel isn't shined, sir." "Yes, sir." "Your breech lock has a streak of grease on it." "Yes, sir." "Your blankets aren't rolled properly." "Yes, sir." "I'm amazed at you, Private Bullard." "Yes, sir; thank you, sir." Inspection over, a large and condoling crowd of messmates gathered around the only private in D company who had got a call. "Doggone!" exclaimed that unhappy lad. "Why don't he know enough to keep out of here?"

45,000 FEET ALOFT IS FLYING LIMIT

Speed at Turns Must Not Exceed 250 Miles.

Washington.—Flight surgeons of the army air service believe man has about reached the maximum flying speed at which he can suddenly change direction, owing to the centrifugal force exerted on the body and its effect on the blood. This speed is placed in the vicinity of 250 miles an hour.

The limit of speed on a straightaway course, they say, can probably be placed much higher than is now mechanically possible, but experience will have to write the actual figure.

The height limit, they add, is around 45,000 feet.

This contention regarding the maximum speed for turning, the flight surgeons point out, is predicated upon the experience of Lieut. Alvin J. Williams of the navy, at the Pulitzer air races at St. Louis in October, 1923, who said he became practically unconscious at the turns of the triangular course, when he rounded at 243.67 miles an hour.

Blood Carried to Stomach and Legs.

The flyer at the turn banks his craft at right angles, the centrifugal force acting at right angles to the new direction of travel and the blood being carried away from the head toward the stomach, and probably even into the legs, causes faintness and possibly unconsciousness.

Blood circulation quickly adjusts itself, the flight surgeons say, and the direction of centrifugal force is rapidly changed, although at turns at very high speeds in airplanes, brain injury or rupture of a vital blood vessel might result.

Even when supplied with oxygen, the flight surgeons hold, an aviator could not survive beyond a height of 45,000 feet, under ordinary circumstances, because the available oxygen pressure in the lungs would be too low to sustain life.

Between 23,000 and 25,000 feet is the "upper limit of consciousness" without oxygen, say the flight surgeons, and at higher altitudes oxygen is indispensable.

Only if inclosed in a cabinet or suit in which the barometric pressure were kept at a degree compatible with life would it be possible to ascend beyond the 45,000 limit, with suitable arrangement made for disposing of the surplus carbon dioxide.

Queer Experiences at High Altitude.

The aviator experiences, among other things, as the result of high altitude flights, sleepiness, uncontrolled emotion, including giggling, singing or laughter; muscular weakness, shortness of breath, impairment of the intellect and judgment, and impairment of vision and hearing.

These are chiefly due, medical men explain, to a lack of oxygen in the brain.

There are 50 army flight surgeons stationed at different flying fields, all on flying status. A flight medical school is maintained at Mitchell field, New York, where courses are given select medical officers picked for aviation duty. Aviation psychology forms a large share of their work, and they are acquainted with first-hand conditions of the men who go up in the air in ships.

The National Aeronautic association's records show that the present maximum altitude record is held by a French flyer with 39,586 feet, and the speed record in a straightaway course is held by another French airman at 278.48 miles an hour.

Student Wants Divorce to Give Life to Art

Paris.—"I love my art more than my wife," was the assertion of a young architectural student entered for the French government's Prix de Rome when he discovered that the rules would not allow married men to inhabit the Villa of the Medici, the home of France's art school in the Eternal City.

At first the young architect tried to pass himself off as a bachelor, but when this ruse was discovered he calmly offered to get a divorce. The Academy of Fine Arts sternly replied by voting to exclude him from all the competitions under its auspices, whereupon the would-be dweller among the seven hills appeal to the minister of education and fine arts to have the decision reversed.

Up to the present nobody seems to have consulted the wife in the case.

Trapper and Author Asks Body Be Burned

He published a book on practical trapping, thinking it would bring him a fortune. No relatives are known here.

Bryn Mawr Girl Elopes With Owner of Garage

Philadelphia.—After police searched highways and hospitals all night for Miss Mary L. Norris, Bryn Mawr society girl, and after the police of New York, Baltimore and Washington had been enlisted in the hunt, it was learned the young woman had eloped to Elkton, Md., where she was married. The bridegroom is Warren R. Vanmeter, owner of a service station and garage.

Miss Norris is a debutante of four years ago and lived with her father, Isaac Norris, at Fairhill, Bryn Mawr. She left home, saying she was going to visit a friend. When she had not returned at midnight, her father made inquiries and learned she had not visited the friend's home. The police were notified and given a description, with photographs of the young woman.

It was later learned Miss Norris and Vanmeter had driven to Elkton, which they reached shortly after 2 in the morning. They awakened a marriage license clerk, who issued the license. They went to the home of Rev. Ernest B. Weaver, where they were married. Miss Norris has achieved prominence as a breeder of English bulldogs at the family estate. Her father is the son of Dr. Isaac Norris, who was an eminent physician.

The Cecil B. DeMille production, "The Golden Bed" a Paramount picture adapted by Jeanie Macpherson from the novel of the same name by Wallace Irwin, is the feature at the Met theatre.

In the picture we have a decaying family whose one asset is their very beautiful daughter, Flora Lee, played by Lillian Rich, a new De Mille "find". There is a Cinderella sister (Vera Reynolds) who is always shoved into the background to give Flora Lee every advantage.

La Rocque has the role of a young man who runs a candy store in the village. He adores the beauty. She treats him as so much dirt under her feet. His business expands. He becomes king of a chain of candy stores.

At once he is the prey of the family. Flora Lee is groomed for him. As the children have grown up, Margaret (Miss Reynolds) has fallen very much in love with Admah Holtz, the part played by La Rocque. She fights for her love and loses.

All thru the picture there is the symbol of the golden bed—luxury. The map is wrecked, his life made a ruin. Flora Lee dies and we have the struggle back to regeneration and real love by Admah and Margaret.

The trio of players mentioned above appear in featured roles in the cast of "The Golden Bed" along with Warner Baxter, Theodore Kosloff and Julia Faye.

Robert Edson, Henry Walthall and Robert Cain are but a few of the big names playing in support.

Face the Truth.

As courage and intelligence are the two qualities best worth a good man's cultivation, so it is the first part of intelligence to recognize our precarious estate in life, and the first part of courage to be not at all abashed before the fact.—Stevenson.

WIDE SURVEY BEING MADE FOR FARMERS

Ultimate Object is to Secure Benefits of Electricity in Country.

Columbus, May 18.—Electrification of Ohio farms and rural communities is the ultimate object of a survey which is just now getting under way, according to announcement made today by the Ohio Committee on the Relation of Electricity to Agriculture.

This committee, which is to study the benefits that electricity will bring to rural life and how it may be possible for the farm to have these electrical advantages, is made up of representatives of Ohio State University, the State Grange, the Farm Bureau Federation, public utilities companies and electrical equipment manufacturers. Similar studies are also being made in other states.

Latest figures show that Ohio has 256,000 farms. Of this number 33,000 or 12.9 per cent have electricity from one source or other. The per centages vary from 1.8 per cent in Monroe and Vinton counties to as high as 35 and 36 per cent in Sandusky and Cuyahoga counties.

"Present plans of the committee are to make first surveys of several different communities in the state representing different types of agriculture, and to select farms in these communities which have been electrified for some five years or more," says P. B. Potter, executive secretary of the committee.

Dean Alfred Vivian of the College of Agriculture, Dean E. A. Hitchcock of the College of Electrical Engineering and Prof. G. W. McCuen represent Ohio State University on the committee.

The Ohio Farm Bureau Federation is represented by L. B. Palmer and M. D. Lincoln, while C. A. Dyer, H. A. Caton and R. B. Thompson represent the state grange.

For the utility companies, J. B. Johnson, E. T. Wagenhals and O. H. Hutchins are on the committee, with W. H. Prior, G. E. Reiff and Nemo Elmstead representing the equipment manufacturers.

B. P. Hess, a graduate of the College of Agriculture, O. S. U., and also a county farm agent, is to do the field work on the survey.

GERM IS BURNED AFTER LONG TRIP

Scientist Carries Virus of Hog Disease 9,000 Miles.

Washington.—The story of an East African scientist, who journeyed 9,000 miles to give the Department of Agriculture a sample of hog blood containing the virus of a dread disease, only to have it tossed into an incinerator, was related by department officials. A similar fate awaited the specimen of a virus of the foot-and-mouth disease, brought by a Swiss watchmaker who desired to experiment with it in the hope of discovering a cure.

Success of the bureau of animal industry in combating hog cholera in this country prompted the African scientist to ask the bureau to experiment with the virus he brought. He explained to Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the bureau, that the disease had caused enormous fatalities among African hogs and gave him a bottle filled with the infected blood.

Doctor Mohler took the bottle, stepped to an incinerator and threw it into the flames.

The scientist was told that the place to study the disease is East Africa, not in this country, where escape of the virus might cause great damage to the hog industry. The same explanation was given to the Swiss. Experts of the bureau, Doctor Mohler said, soon will visit foreign countries where the foot-and-mouth disease is prevalent to study it, $75,000 having been made available by congress recently for the work.

The recent outbreak in this country of the European fowl pest has been attributed by Doctor Mohler to escape of some of the virus known to have been brought from France by an American investigator.

WILL SEEK WEATHER DATA HIGH IN AIR

To Make Daily Flights to Study Conditions.

Washington.—Knowledge of hitherto unknown air conditions at high altitudes which will enable the weather bureau to make forecasts with more certainty and for a more advanced period will be made available to that office under arrangements completed with the naval air station at Anacostia.

According to the program, naval planes will make special daily flights carrying an aerological observer equipped with instruments to record the air temperature and humidity far above the earth. A naval aerologist schooled in weather observations and forecasts, will be assigned to the work. He will carry with him in the plane thermometers and barometers which will record conditions with mathematical accuracy.

Upon descent the officer will immediately transmit the data he has gathered to the weather bureau for use in daily forecasts and to army and navy aviation stations in and near Washington for their guidance in flying.

Temperature and humidity at great distances above the earth's surface have always given an element of uncertainty to weather forecasts and have made "long-range predictions" almost impossible. These elements in the upper air have a direct influence on weather conditions of the surface. With accurate information as to the conditions available the weather bureau is expected to establish a new record for veracity and farsightedness.

1,000 Square Miles Added to Land of Louisiana

Lockport, La.—According to a recent aerial survey, more than 1,000 square miles of land have been added to the area of the state of Louisiana by deposits of silt left by the Mississippi river in the last 25 years.

The survey shows that one sector of the land extends out to sea 12 miles farther than it did in 1900. Bays and inlets, in many cases, have been entirely filled in and numerous streams have disappeared. The building of a drainage system and the clearing of the land are responsible for the increasing deposits of silt and the slow but certain growth of land bordering on the river.

Treasure Under Snow

Bank checks, drafts and remittances worth $200,000, sent by Oswego banks to their New York correspondents, lay under a five-foot pile of snow near the Syracuse trolley terminal for a week until uncovered by the police. When the mail did not reach New York an investigation was started, and the bags were traced to Syracuse. They had been thrown off a trolley at the station and a snowstorm covered them.

Gets Electric Ray Fish That Could Stun Elephant
Danville, Va.—Dr. Russell J. Coles, robaconist, whose hobby is deep-sea fishing, and who taught the late Theodore Roosevelt harpooning of devil fish, has presented to the Museum of Natural History in New York a giant specimen of the electric ray fish. He caught it off Morehead City, N. C. It weighed 120 pounds, and, according to Doctor Coles, had a sufficient charge to "stun an elephant." It was stranded near his boat, he says, by a receding tide. Members of his crew prevented it from regaining the sea. When dead the electric energy stored in what Doctor Coles describes as batteries near the head of the fish, was found to be negligible. It was placed in preserving fluid and shipped to the curator of the museum.

ED WALLACE BAKERY

Famous Coast Whaler Becomes a Movie Ship
Los Angeles.—Conversion into a motion-picture ship will be the fate of the picturesque old barkentine, Narwhal, which for more than forty years was conspicuous in Pacific coast shipping, and whose romantic history over that period reads like the pages of old-time fiction.
The Narwhal, built at San Francisco in 1883, is one of the finest examples afloat of sailing-ship construction. In the view of the shipping men. Immediately after her launching she was entered in the whaling industry, in which she remained for many years. During that time she established many records, both in whale catches and fast cruises. After leaving the pursuit of whales, the craft was used for a number of years in the trade to the South seas.
The final voyage of the Narwhal ended last year when she crept into San Francisco harbor from an expedition to the South seas. On her outbound trip from San Francisco, the barkentine disappeared for a period of sixteen months and was recorded as lost at sea. She later appeared at a South sea port, however, bearing stories of terrific wind storms.
Shortly after casting anchor at San Francisco the Narwhal was sold at auction to satisfy claims, and the motion-picture interest that acquired the old-time whaler will move her down the coast to San Pedro.

Where Did It Come From?
James Carrigan, a farmer living near Castle, N. Y., killed a beef and discovered in the animal's stomach six suction cups and six feet of three-quarter-inch rubber hose, belonging to a milking machine. And the man from whom the cow was bought declares that he never had a milking machine during the 18 months the cow was in his possession.

MEMORIAL TO HARDING BY KIWANIANS

To be Erected in British Columbia Where He Made Last Address.

The total amount of funds for the erection and completion of the Harding memorial to be built in Stanley park, Vancouver, British Columbia, raised by voluntary contributions from Kiwanians of Canada and the United States is assured, according to the announcement of the board of trustees of Kiwanis International recently.

This memorial to the late President Warren G. Harding is to be erected on the spot where he made his last public address in Vancouver, British Columbia. Besides being a memorial to the late president who was an active Kiwanian of Marion, Ohio, it also will commemorate the good will and understanding which has always existed between the United States and Canada.

Dedication of the memorial is to take place on September 16, when it is expected that President Coolidge and Premier MacKenzie King, Canada will be present, together with a large gathering of notable officials and visitors.

It is believed that this will be the first time that the leading executives of both countries will take part in the commemoration of an international event so important to the people of the two commonwealths.

Baby's Long Nails Are Weapons.
The people of Greece abide strongly by the old traditions and customs of their forefathers and in living up to these customs many of the modern ideas of sanitation and hygiene are delayed in their progress. The vital point in the baby's life is the matter of protecting him from the spirits of evil which are supposed to hover over his cradle and follow him through the day. The poor baby has to endure many strange ceremonies before his parents feel at all assured of his future. The finger nail myth is much respected. The belief is that if a baby's nails are never cut and are permitted to grow long and ragged he will, when he waves his arms about, scratch the face of the demon of theft, and the demon, disliking it, will fly away and so not possess himself of the infant's soul.

FAMOUS TOWER OF PISA IN DANGER OF FALLING

Italy Will Call for Help of American Engineers to Save Ancient Monument.

Rome.—After 771 years of giddy leaning exactly 16 feet out of plumb the famous tower of Pisa has added a few inches to its cant. Unless remedial measures are adopted soon, the remarkable old pile will finally stretch its 188 feet of length lengthwise with a sudden crash.

The problem of succoring the tower is too much for European engineering technique, so Italy plans to send to the United States for engineers to move the medieval monument to a safer foundation in another corner of the square it has overlooked for nearly ten centuries.

Subterranean streams have weakened the tower's site. When it was built in 1154 the ancient architect envisaged a sturdy, upright tower which would carry his fame to posterity. Even as the workmen placed the stones of the round tower body the tower began to lean. Before the thing was completed the uppermost cornice jutted out of perpendicular. Some slight alterations were made, and the structure achieved fame through the centuries as the leaning tower of Pisa.

Because the tower rests on the surface of the ground, it is believed that it easily could be lifted and removed to a spot where bedrock would assure against another tardy subsidence. The structure could retain its unnatural slant on its new site.

There is no immediate danger of collapse, according to the Italian engineers who discovered that the slant had increased. Tests probably will be made of the subsoil in various sections of the spacious square and a convenient and safe spot selected.

European engineers are rarely called upon to deal with buildings that cannot be scaled with ladders. Business houses and residences are not high. Therefore, American experience will be welcome when Italy decides upon the time and place of removal of the tower of Pisa.

The largest bacillus recorded is about 1-500 of an inch long and 1-5,000 of an inch wide, while the smallest known form has an average size of 1-50,000 of an inch by 1-125,000.

Look!

a double boiler*

You've used double boilers, of course, and know how safely cereals and other delicate foods can be cooked in them. The famous Fresh Air Oven of the Estate Gas Range is built exactly like a double boiler, and distributes heat in the same way. No more "humps"—no more scorching—instead, pies and cakes and cookies that melt in the mouth. It's different—this Estate oven—but it's founded on a principle as old as the double boiler. Let us show you how it works—today.

Gambling With Death

By J. U. GIERSY

THE Doctor and Death played the hand. An iron bed was the table across the white surface of which they faced one another as opponents. Upon it lay the stakes—a girl, dark-haired as night, white faced as those little counters men use in playing games of chance.

The Doctor glanced at her closed eyes, her parted lips, and it seemed to him that Death held the stronger hand.

Under the light of the shaded hospital lamp he examined his own. Very carefully he ran over the cards upon his handling of which the outcome hung. He studied each in turn. There was the regular prescription. At best it had proved a poor card. There was his hypodermic needle on a white enameled table, with its group of small bottles of tablets—good, at best, only for the tiding over of an emergency of weakened vitality. There was adrenalin. There was a tank of oxygen. With it he could prolong the struggle—probably no more. Surely it was a poor hand he held.

Sitting silent he summed up his adversary's strength. There was a falling heart, a labored respiration, obdurate nervous sensibility, the delirium of a fever-poisoned brain—four cards, any one of which meant victory for his opponent unless he himself could fill his hand with a better. He glanced at the woman's husband, while his fingers groped lightly for her thready pulse.

The husband was a young man. His eyes met the doctor's in the dumb appeal of mental misery. "How is she?" he framed with his lips rather than spoke the question in his brain.

The physician shook his head slightly. Then with a steady hand he made his first stake. Filling the hypodermic with a tablet in solution he deftly injected the contents into the girl's white arm.

Death paused ere he returned the lead. Almost it seemed to the Doctor that he hesitated before the bold front of the man against whom he played. Very slowly the thread of the pulse under examining finger gained volume. A half hope stirred, correspondingly in his heart. He glanced at the husband again, hesitated, sensed the pulse once more—it faltered, was failing. Death played his return—he had raised.

The husband came to the bed. "Is there any hope?" he begged.

"There must be," the Doctor whispered. He was making ready his next play. Again the needle came into use. It was adrenalin he fed under the pallid covering of the woman's arm. Again he sat down and looked across at Death with a grim defiance in his eyes.

Again Death raised.

Cold perspiration dewed the physician's forehead. As one acting from predetermination he dropped the regular medicine far back upon the patient's tongue.

Death scarcely noticed the action. The effect was negative. It was as though he leered above a winning hand.

"Is there any hope?" The voice of the husband again.

"It's a gamble—a gamble." The physician heard himself answer while his mind ran over the game he played. He had been bluffing and Death knew it. Of what use to bluff with Death? In his wearied condition it came to half seem that he could sense the grim specter across the bed. In the dim light his opponent took on the seeming of a personality. Seizing the oxygen tank, he wheeled it to the bed, adjusted its mask to the girl's face.

Again it appeared that his adversary paused. A little color crept into the lips of the woman, her chest heaved less painfully. But would it—could it last? "Way back in his mind the Doctor knew that once more Death would raise. He glanced at the husband. He was his last card.

"She's a little better, isn't she?" the younger man asked.

"She needs blood—blood," said the Doctor hoarsely. "She needs good, healthy blood. Boy—will you give it to her?"

"How?" The reply was eager, firm. With a quick stride the Doctor reached a small table, drew it into the circle of light. He swept his arm above the instruments upon it. "So—from your arm to hers—transfusion," he returned.

The husband merely nodded, removed his coat, began rolling back his sleeve.

Little by little, as the man grew paler, the woman's color improved. Little by little the pulse under the Doctor's fingers grew firmer, steadied—the breathing attuned itself. His eyes staring into the hollow sockets of the specter with whom he gambled, he stood and waited.

Suddenly he checked the flow, removed the tubes and cast them from him. He began to laugh, softly, as a chuckle—louder and louder, until the cacchination rang through the room in horrible waves of an almost insane exultation.

Her arm about him, the nurse steadied him from the room, and still as he went he laughed. "Beaten! I've beaten you, Death! I held it back on you, Death! It was my ace in the hole! You thought you had me—but I beat you! I beat you, Death—with Life!"

Yet no one wondered at this overwrought emotion, for the woman was the Doctor's only child.

Queer "Parliamentary" Tactics.

The palm for parliamentary battles probably belongs to a small island near Tahiti. A trader induced the local natives, who are cannibals, to abandon their wars in favor of more civilized procedure, and to encourage them he built at his own expense a fine house of commons made of plaited palm leaves and furnished with soap boxes as seats. Alas! for his faith in parliaments. When he turned up for the first day's assembly it was to find that the "government" had attacked the opposition party from a neighboring island by kidnapping all their warriors, allowing only the aged and infirm to continue the journey to the parliament which was to settle their respective futures.—London Times.

Rain Never Falls There

The territory between the first and second cataracts of the Nile in Egypt is said to be the hottest place on earth. No rain ever falls there and natives are convinced there is none.

Columbus, O., May 18 — Judge Rogers in common pleas court late today on motion of the defense ordered the jury in the trial of Dean C. Throckmorton, presiding judge of the Columbus municipal court, charged with accepting a bribe to return a verdict of not guilty.

This action came after Louis Josephson who had said previously that he bribed the judge when he was an assistant in the securities division, admitted that he had only loaned the money to Throckmorton.

The jury then retired and brought in the verdict as ordered.

Death Ends Dog's Long Vigil at Master's Tomb

Lancaster, Ohio.—Death has ended the long vigil of Nero, a dog who died on his master's grave in a lonely cemetery here. His owner, Charles Farmer, was shot to death last July in a gun fight with prohibition officers. Nero followed the funeral procession to the cemetery, where he kept watch daily, leaving the grave at short intervals for food. All efforts to coax the dog away failed.

A boulder now marks the grave of Nero.

Ministers in their sermons referred, just as they have in the past six months, to the love and devotion of Nero for his master.
